The Range Conservation Foundation is a nonprofit 501(3)(c) organization, with the mandate to promote and encourage responsible stewardship for the care and protection of America's rangelands as a multiple-use resource. RCF will accomplish this by collecting and disseminating information on strategies for successful range management, enhancement and conservation across the United States. Information generated by RCF will be disseminated in magazine articles, publication of special reports and on a free-access Web site.

RCF has funded dozens of special reports by academics, scientists, and scholars. RCF also helps underwrite the costs of investigative reporting about land use, water allocation, and conservation issues. These reports are disseminated as magazine articles or as separate publications. Many will also be available to anyone, free of charge, on the Internet. We feel it is urgent to provide a voice for responsible resource users.
